Can deactivated domain names be renewed?

Agent - 2026-10-13 - Renewal of domains

Yes, deactivated domain names can be renewed up until the domain name's delete date.

If the domain name is deactivated because the registrant requested deactivation but then has a change of mind, the registrar can reactivate the domain by "reclaiming" the deregistration request with a cancellation request.

If the domain name is deactivated due to an unpaid annual fee, the registrar must renew the domain in the normal manner (renew) to make the domain active again.

When the deactivation period expires, the domain will be transferred to an internal registrar and placed in quarantine. At this stage, the previous registrant cannot reclaim the domain name. The domain will be released after the quarantine period ends.
